The Honorable Todd Stern
Special Envoy for Climate Change
U.S. Department of State
2201 C Street NW
Washington, DC 20520

Dear Mr. Stern,

On behalf of the nation's largest environmental and labor organizations, we write to thank you for supporting inclusion of Just Transition language in negotiating text for the eventual Paris agreement, and we strongly encourage you to ensure that language remains operational in the final agreement. Broadly, we wish to express our collective desire for action on climate change that builds resilient infrastructure, improves community health and safety, safeguards wildlife, and strengthens and creates economic opportunities and sustainability for all citizens. In Paris, we have an opportunity to achieve an ambitious and comprehensive deal that secures our environmental and economic future.

That opportunity is before us now for many reasons, among them being the work done by President Obama's Administration to achieve a successful outcome in Paris. We appreciate your efforts, and continue to urge that we must seize this occasion to act, and also do so in a way that maximizes opportunities for all. Your most recent action to include Just Transition language in the preamble during the current intercessional is most laudable, and the recent addition of language into the operational section of the Agreement is incredibly heartening and necessary if we are to create action and not just be symbolic. An absence of Just Transition/Decent Work language in the operational portion of the Paris agreement would mean that the cost for the transition to a low-carbon society would be unfairly born by working men and women.

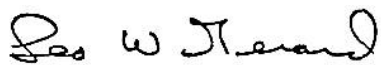

As such we urge you to:

- Keep Just Transition and Decent Work language in the preamble and operational Articles of the future Paris Agreement, as stated in the bracketed section of Article 2, Option 1 of the draft agreement and decision from October 23, 2015<sup>i</sup>:
  - "This agreement shall be implemented... while ensuring... a just transition of the workforce and creation of decent work and quality jobs in accordance with nationally defined development priorities..."

We would also like to remind you that references to this commitment were adopted by previous COP decisions.<sup>ii</sup> Tripartite conclusions were reached on the content of the concept of Just Transition at the International Labour Organization (ILO).<sup>iii</sup> Tripartite Guidelines on Just Transition are to be agreed in October, and adopted in the ILO Governing Body in November of this year.

For the Paris agreement to be truly sustainable, it must confirm governments' commitment to a Just Transition. We look forward to sharing our thoughts on additional items related to COP21 as the time draws closer, and continually working with you to ensure that Just Transition is properly addressed.

Sincerely,
